News & Record GREENSBORO -- Four generations of Ozments gathered at Lois Ozment Ward's house Saturday to welcome home a piece of family history they hadn't even known was lost.

Windy Booher, a reporter from Florida, had driven more than 10 hours to return a Purple Heart medal awarded to Ward's brother, Andrew F. Ozment.

No one knows how the medal ended up on a Florida street where it was found a few months ago.

On Saturday, the Ozments didn't really care so much about how it got lost as they did about how it got back home.

"If it wouldn't have been for your hard work, we wouldn't have the medal," Donna Jordan, Ward's granddaughter, told Booher.

Ozment is apparently Greensboro's first World War II casualty. The sailor was wounded in a Japanese attack on his destroyer in the South China Sea not long after the infamous attack on Pearl Harbor. The family plans to donate the medal to the Greensboro Historical Museum.

A dozen family members crowded around Booher on Saturday as she told her story. Ten-year-old Price Ozment, a great-great nephew of Andrew Ozment's, clutched the medal with its tattered and faded ribbon as he listened.

A young girl in Altha, Fla., found the medal lying in the street, Booher said. It ended up with William Brantley, a retired Army veteran and genealogy buff. He called every Ozment in Florida with no luck before taking his dilemma to the News-Herald in Panama City, Fla., on Nov. 13.

"Whoever took the message thought it fell on my beat," said Booher, 23, who covers city government.

Less than a week later, she had tracked down the Ozments to Greensboro and promised to return the medal personally.

The medal's saga touched Booher, who has a keen interest in military history. Her grandfather fought in World War II.

And Panama City sits about 13 miles from Tyndall Air Force Base, home of the 325th Fighter Wing that is responsible for training America's F-15 pilots and maintenance personnel.

The community's close tie to the military -- Tyndall, founded in 1941, is the county's largest employer with more than 6,600 employees - made Booher's search that much easier.

"This is a military town, so a lot of people kind of latched onto this story,"

Booher said. "Everybody pitched in and sent in tips."

The Ozments asked Booher for addresses of those who helped so they could thank them and said they plan to send a letter to the editor at Booher's paper thanking the community.

"It's hard to say how appreciative you are to all these people," said Monroe Ozment, Andrew Ozment's nephew.

Family members hugged Booher on Saturday, asked her to pose for pictures and took her to dinner as a thank-you for her diligence.

Booher, who graduated from a Massachusetts college in May, says she seems to "have the dumbest luck" stumbling across remarkable stories.

When she was a summer intern in 2001, a man called claiming to have an original lithograph of the Washington Monument. He had bought it for $50 at an estate sale and wondered if Booher would do a story.

She told him to bring it in, thinking it would just be a copy and not worthy of an article. Turns out it was very worthy, she said: an original worth $2 million.
